The English Romantic poet, John Keats, stayed in Winchester during the late summer and early autumn of 1819. Keats enjoyed a daily walk through the Cathedral Close and water meadows to St Cross. Inspired by the natural beauty of Winchester on Sunday 19 September 1819 he penned his ode ‘To Autumn’ on his return. The area has changed little since Keats visited - read on and take the walk yourself...

_To Autumn_

SEASON of mists and mellow fruitfulness,
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the via’d cottage-trees,_

And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,_

Until they think warm days will never cease;
For Summer has o’erbrimm’d their clammy cells._

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?
Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find
Thee sitting careless on a granary floor,
Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing wind; _

Or on a half-reap’d furrow sound asleep,
Drowsed with the fume of poppies, while thy hook
Sparces the next swath and all its twinèd flowers:
And sometimes like a gleaner thou dost keep
Steady thy laden head across a brook;
Or by a cyder-press, with patient look,
Thou watchest the last oozings, hours by hours._

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While barr’d clouds bloom the soft-dying day
And touch the stubble-plains with rosy hue; _

Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn
Among the river-sallows, borne aloft
Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;
And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;
Hedge-cricket sings; and now with treble soft
The redbreast whistles from a garden-croft;
And gathering swallows twitter in the skies._

A detailed Visitor Map of Winchester city centre is available at the tourist information centre.
We invite you to follow in the poet's footsteps from the city to St Cross, passing through the landscape which inspired the ode To Autumn.

The round trip covers approximately two miles on pavements, gravel paths and grass. The walk begins at the tourist information centre in the Victorian Guildhall, close to King Alfred's statue. It is likely that Keats' lodgings were on the north side of the cathedral and the High Street, but the exact address is unknown.

Turn left outside the tourist information centre and walk up the High Street. Take the second left into Market Street and continue to the 'beautiful front' of Winchester Cathedral.

Winchester Cathedral was already 725 years old when Keats visited. Two years previously Jane Austen had been buried here, although there is no mention of her literary occupation on her tombstone in the north aisle. Keats would walk up and down this aisle reading letters from Fanny Brawne. In 1872 and 1900 respectively a brass plaque and a stained glass window were erected in Austen's memory.

From the cathedral, turn left under stone arches and walk through the Inner Close.

Keats described the Close as: 'two college-like squares seemingly built for the dwelling place of Deans and Prebendaries - garnished with grass and shaded with trees'.

The lovely buildings of the Inner Close include the ruined Chapter House, the 14th century Deane and Pilgrims' School where the cathedral choristers and Winchester College quirestes are educated.

One of Winchester's most photographed buildings is Cheyne Court, formerly the Bishop's courthouse.

Leaving the Inner Close by St Swithun's Gate, adjacent to Cheyne Court.

On your left is Kingsgate, one of only two surviving city gates, with the tiny church of St-Swithin-upon-Kingsgate above.

If you have time to browse, this tucked-away area holds some of the city's best-kept shopping secrets.

Jane Austen spent the last few weeks of her life at Number 8 College Street, where she completed her last novel Persuasion. She died on 18 July 1817.

This area of Winchester is dominated by Winchester College, founded in 1382 by Bishop William of Wykeham. It is the oldest continuously running public school in England. Take the fascinating tour to glimpse the 14th century chapel with its unusual wooden vaulted roof and a red brick schoolroom attributed to Wren.

On your left at the end of College Street is the present-day bishop's palace, Wolvesey. Beyond lie the ruins of the extensive palace of the medieval bishops, known as Wolvesey Castle.

To the right are the neatly clipped cricket pitches of Winchester College and ahead is the towering mound of St Catherine's Hill.

Turn right into College Walk. At the end turn right into the Winchester College car park onto the path through the water meadows.

Walk through the water meadows as Keats did, alongside a chalk stream of the River Itchen with its trout, moorhens and wild flowers. The angler Izaak Walton, who is buried in the cathedral, fished in the River Itchen.

To the right are the neatly clipped cricket pitches of Winchester College and ahead is the towering mound of St Catherine's Hill.

After half a mile cross Garnier Road and continue for a further quarter of a mile until you reach Hospital of St Cross.

Keats described St Cross as: 'a very interesting old place, both for its gothic tower and alm-squares, and for the appropriation of its rich rents to a relation of the Bishop of Winchester' - a reference to a contemporary corruption scandal which was one of the themes of Anthony Trollope's novel The Warden 35 years later.

The mellow Medieval buildings of the Hospital of St Cross enjoy an idyllic meadow landscape setting. Founded in 1136, the hospital is the country's oldest charitable institution and still functions as an almshouse. Those arriving on foot may ask for the Wayfarer's Dole, bread and ale which has been given to travellers since the almshouse was founded. The Hospital serves refreshments in the summer months, and The Bell Inn on St Cross Road is the nearest pub. Keats' final instruction is: 'pass across St Cross meadows till you come to the most beautifully clear river'. He did not elaborate further and we do not know his return route.

To return to the city you could retrace your footsteps through the water meadows or, if you prefer a paved route, walk along Back Street, St Faith's Road, Kingsgate Road and Kingsgate Street. St Cross Road is also paved and buses are available.

There is some evidence that Keats may have returned via St Catherine's Hill and the Ichen Navigation. He said: 'there is on one side of the city a dry chalky down where the air is worth sixpence a pint', a description which would fit this area.

A map is recommended if you wish to explore further. For a memorable conclusion to your walk, why not take in evensong at the cathedral? It is sung at 5.30pm on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday and at 3.30pm on Sunday. On Wednesday the service is usually said at 5.30pm.
