Attractions

1 St George's Square

The Jubilee Clock stands where the former Market House building stood. The earliest reference to a market in Bishop's Waltham is in Edward I's reign, but no market was ever held in the Market House

2 Bishop's Waltham Palace Ruins

Even by the standards of the powerful medieval Bishops of Winchester, Bishop's Waltham Palace in Hampshire was a grand residence. Much remains of the 12th and 14th century buildings, which were begun by Bishop Henry of Blois, brother of King Stephen. Set within attractive grounds, they include the impressive three-storey tower and the fine windows of the great hall built by William of Wykeham, bishop from 1367 and founder of Winchester College and New College, Oxford.

3 St Peter's Church

In 1136, Henry of Blois started building a church at the site where St Peter's stands today, away from the palace and pond where the original Saxon church stood. His many other building projects included Wolvesey Castle, and he also founded the magnificent Hospital of St. Cross. Scarcely anything remains of the 12th century church, apart from some fragments of the south arcade capitals found in 1897, and now on display beneath the pulpit. The earliest dates from about 1200 when Godfrey de Lucy was Bishop (1189–1204).

St. Peter's has been rebuilt, enlarged and restored in succeeding centuries to counter the ravages of time and to meet the changing needs of the generations. St Peter's is unusual in having extensive alterations dating from the late 16th and mid-17th centuries. A restoration in 1894–97 created the church we see today.

4 Bishop's Waltham Museum

The Bishop's Waltham Palace lodging range later became a farmhouse and it now houses the Bishop's Waltham Museum

5 The Ponds

Bishop Henry of Blois created a pond 700 years ago to provide fresh fish and impress his visitors. In the late 1960s a road was built across the Great Pond dividing it in two. The South Pond holds water all the year round and is leased to the Bishop's Waltham fishing Club. The North Pond has been designated as a SINC (Site of Importance for Nature Conservation) for its wetland flora and fauna. The North Pond is currently maintained by the North Pond Conservation Group.

The Oral History Bench is located in the Basingwell Street seating areas and tells wartime stories of villagers, who recall their experiences from the 40s in the local area.
